Loftus Peak Global Disruption Fund

Investing | Future Focused

Research Ratings:

July 2023 Update

Founded in 2014, Loftus Peak is a global fund manager with a focus on investment in listed disruptive businesses. We have extensive experience and bring significant discipline to the process. Our Australian Securities Exchange listed Fund (ASX code: LPGD) comprises some of the best and fastest-growing companies in the world – companies that we believe are driving change across all industries globally, constructed on the basis of strict criteria and included at carefully determined valuations. Holdings include large capitalisation names like Apple and Google (Alphabet) as well as many others that we expect to be household names in the future, such as Advanced Micro Devices and Qualcomm. This approach to investment across a wide range of global industries lowers the concentration risk inherent in the typical Australian portfolio, with its heavy skew toward banks, resources and the Australian dollar.

Review and Performance

The Fund grew +5.4% net-of-fees during July, generating +2.6% outperformance against our benchmark index, the MSCI All Countries World Index (net) as expressed in AUD from Bloomberg, which was up +2.8%.

It now seems that markets were right to rally in the first half of the year, with the US Federal Reserve's program of interest rate rises to curb inflation appearing to have worked. The consumer price index remains controlled and even more pleasing is the absence of the predicted recession, with unemployment sitting around a respectable 4% and second quarter GDP up +2.4% annualised.

Contributors and Detractors to Return

The Fund's performance was underpinned by Roku (increasing Fund value by +2.1%), Qualcomm (+1.3%) and Alphabet (Google) (+0.8%), with good contributions from companies such as ON Semiconductor (+0.2%) and Wolfspeed (+0.3%), the latter two of which are important players in vehicle electrification. ON reported on the last day of this month, with better-than-expected earnings and revenue for the quarter and an upgrade to guidance to both in the three months to September this year.

Qualcomm, our largest position, advanced because of the perception that smartphone and laptops are set to recover in the coming months. Roku performed very well late in the month from an oversold position. Investors again contemplated the company's commanding lead in free ad-supported streamed television (FAST) at a time when advertising growth is poised to re-accelerate.

Alphabet (Google) surprised with a return to advertising revenue growth and an extension in profitability for the Google Cloud Platform first shown last guarter.

Taiwan Semiconductor was the biggest detractor for the month, cutting -0.2% from the Fund's value, with the next three worst detractors (Netflix, Microsoft and Arista Networks) summing to only a -0.4% reduction. Microsoft's relative underperformance is to a certain extent a function of timing - the company is up around +40% this year as it has made all-time highs fuelled by artificial intelligence (AI). Microsoft's AI products have access to one of the broadest groups of enterprise customers in the world today. Already, the company is adding AI to applications including Office, Teams and Enterprise, with new tiered pricing announced earlier in the month.

Arista Networks, which was a detractor for July, reported in the aftermarket of the last day of the month. The company beat consensus on the top and bottom line and recovered well. Arista reported this strong result because of its important position in the Al tools story: very fast connectivity in the datacentre is its core competency.

Netflix too had a pullback on subscriber growth numbers (which were solid nonetheless at 5 million). The market sold the company down because it wanted more, but this view fails to take account of the competitive failure of streaming rivals including Paramount+, the storied HBO and even Disney. Their inability to generate profits as they attempt to scale has scared away investors, who are not prepared to reward an unsuccessful business model with a big valuation.

The Australian dollar appreciated +1.2% against the US dollar over the month, which meant the value of the Fund's US dollar positions decreased. As at 31 July 2023, the Fund carried a foreign currency exposure of 95.3%.
