March 2024 Update

Founded in 2014, Loftus Peak is a global fund manager with a focus on investment in listed disruptive businesses. We have extensive experience and bring significant discipline to the process. Our Australian Securities Exchange listed Fund (ASX code: LPGD) comprises some of the best and fastest-growing companies in the world – companies that we believe are driving change across all industries globally, constructed on the basis of strict criteria and included at carefully determined valuations. Holdings include large capitalisation names like Microsoft and Google (Alphabet) as well as many others that we expect to be household names in the future, such as Advanced Micro Devices and Qualcomm. This approach to investment across a wide range of global industries lowers the concentration risk inherent in the typical Australian portfolio, with its heavy skew toward banks, resources and the Australian dollar.

Review and Performance

The tail end of December quarter company reporting in March was generally positive for Fund holdings, resulting in a return of +3.5% net-of-fees for the month. This was outperformance of +0.7% relative to the Fund's benchmark, the MSCI All Countries World Index (net) as expressed in Australian dollars (AUD) from Bloomberg.

March saw the year's second U.S. Federal Reserve meeting, which yielded a widely anticipated result of no change to the Fed Fund rate. Despite some economic data pointing to a relatively robust U.S. economy (a stronger economy gives the Fed less leeway to cut rates), Fed Chair Jerome Powell struck a rather dovish tone. The dot plots (which indicates Fed member predictions of future rates) indicates three rate cuts across 2024.

Investment returns for the quarter were also strong. The so-called "Magnificent Seven" has now slimmed down to the "Fab Four" and continue to rise higher.

<sup>1</sup> Net-of-fees performance for the Fund is based on end-of-month redemption prices after the deduction of fees and expenses and the reinvestment of all distributions. Investment return and the principal value fluctuate, so your units, when sold, may be worth more or less than the original cost. For further details, please refer to the Fund's Product Disclosure Statement and Target Market Determination.

Contributors and Detractors to Return

The largest contributor for the month was Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing, which contributed +1.1% to the Fund's return. The company is the linchpin for the global high end semiconductor industry. AI chips from Nvidia to Broadcom are manufactured by TSMC. Despite last year's movements in Artificial Intelligence (AI) related semiconductors, TSMC continues to trade at a discount to the S&P 500. The company is the beneficiary of the uptick in demand for AI chips as well as cyclical recovery of traditional end markets in electronic devices.

Micron Technology, the second largest contributor for the month, added +0.9% to the Fund. The share price soared following its earnings report. Micron designs memory chips, the necessary component needed to complement the logic chips of Nvidia and Advanced Micro Devices. Memory is historically a cyclical industry, however the additional demand from AI as well as incremental internet of things (IoT) use cases have pulled forward the demand for memory. This has allowed the company to significantly increase earnings as it heads back into the cyclical tailwind of its traditional end markets in consumer electronics (much like TSMC).

Consumer electronics are themselves being disrupted with Qualcomm, a mainstay player in mobile phones and the third largest contributor for the month. The company contributed +0.6% after releasing further information on its upcoming Snapdragon X Elite, which will be the company's first meaningful foray into chips for laptops and perhaps the first meaningful debut of the ARM architecture into personal electronic devices. This disrupts incumbent computer chip producers, like Intel, by offering customers devices that have longer battery life and are most able to run AI models locally.

Of course, Nvidia remains the key company underpinning the deployment of AI. The company hosted its GPU Technology Conference where it showcased its next generation of data centre chip, the GB200. This chip will use 4nm wafers made by Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing. CEO Jensen Huang has touted the chip as being capable of processing trillion-parameter AI models up to 30 times faster and at one-quarter power usage.

The company is expected to ramp chip shipments in 2025 and will be dilutive to gross margins. This has negative read through for AMD as the lesser margins suggest higher volumes which could crowd out Nvidia alternatives. AMD was among our largest detractors for the month.

The other largest detractors for the month were software names: Adobe and GitLab. The two companies reported during the month. Despite both eclipsing expectations for their earnings, these holdings offered weaker than expected near term guidance. Nevertheless, both these companies retain their longer-term optionality as they roll out generative AI offerings.

The Australian dollar appreciated +0.2% against the US dollar over the month, so the Fund's US dollar positions decreased. As at 28 March 2024, the Fund carried a foreign currency exposure of 92.5%.

Selected Contributors and Detractors

Portfolio Construction

At March month end, the Fund was 96.3% invested in 29 holdings with the balance in cash exposure. The Fund has a high exposure to large capitalisation names which are highly cash generative with strong balance sheets. Focusing on high quality companies helps the Fund to withstand difficult periods in the market and drive strong, long-term outcomes for investors.
