May 2023 Update

Founded in 2014, Loftus Peak is a global fund manager with a focus on investment in listed disruptive businesses. We have extensive experience and bring significant discipline to the process. Our Australian Securities Exchange listed Fund (ASX code: LPGD) comprises some of the best and fastest-growing companies in the world – companies that we believe are driving change across all industries globally, constructed on the basis of strict criteria and included at carefully determined valuations. Holdings include large capitalisation names like Apple and Google (Alphabet) as well as many others that we expect to be household names in the future, such as Advanced Micro Devices and Qualcomm. This approach to investment across a wide range of global industries lowers the concentration risk inherent in the typical Australian portfolio, with its heavy skew toward banks, resources and the Australian dollar.

Review and Performance

May's performance saw the Fund rise a strong +13.7% net-of-fees – the Fund's best absolute monthly result since inception in November 2016. The benchmark grew a more subdued +1.3% resulting in outperformance by the Fund of +12.5%, a record for monthly relative performance.

These figures come after a short but significant rally took hold in the second half of the month. Following Nvidia's earning call - the first time the AI opportunity was enumerated by the company at the revenue level - AI exposed companies soared. This was particularly true of the semiconductor companies which produce the tools driving artificial intelligence.

Across the month, investors wrestled with the risk of the U.S. reaching its debt ceiling and the possibility that the world's largest economy could default for the first time in history. These fears were alleviated following bipartisan support for a bill; increasing the debt ceiling and cutting back future spending modestly. The bill passed the U.S. House of Representatives on the final day of the month.

Year-to-date, the Fund is up +36.9% net-of-fees. The Fund has generated returns of +18.2% p.a. net-of-fees since inception - which translates to +6.4% p.a. outperformance net-of-fees.

¹ Net-of-fees performance for the Fund is based on end-of-month redemption prices after the deduction of fees and expenses and the reinvestment of all distributions.

Investment return and the principal value fluctuate, so your units, when sold, may be worth more or less than the original cost. For further details, please refer to the Fund's Product Disclosure Statement.

² The benchmark for the Fund is the MSCI All Countries World Index (net) as expressed in AUD from Bloomberg.

Contributors and Detractors to Return

The largest contributor to returns this month was Advanced Micro Devices, adding +2.4% to Fund value. The AI-exposed semiconductor company first rode high off its own earnings report. It climbed again in the wake of earnings from graphics processing unit (GPU) juggernaut, Nvidia, where management provided guidance which was head and shoulders above expectations. Nvidia contributed almost half of what AMD did - although from a much smaller weight. Despite the company's leading role in the world of generative AI hardware, its valuations make it harder to hold at larger weights, especially as the company presses towards a US$1 trillion market capitalisation. Custom datacentre chip designer, Marvell Technology, also contributed to the Fund's strong May result with the stock price rising +48% over the month and contributing +0.9% to the Fund's value.

Netflix contributed +1.9% for the month as investors gain confidence around the company's strategy to monetise users who are currently password sharing. Early subscriber data from a third-party provider pointed to early signs of success in the United States (Netflix's largest market), sending the company's shares higher.

Hyperscalers Alphabet and Amazon were also strong contributors for the month. Both companies are enablers of AI through their datacentres along with Microsoft, which also performed well across May despite already enjoying an AI uplift in its share price across 2023 thanks to its association with OpenAI.

The largest detractor for the month was Qualcomm. The company is viewed as less exposed to generative AI than some of its peers in the Fund (despite its chips powering a Stable Diffusion image generation model locally on a smartphone). The company's management estimated on its earnings call that smartphone demand, which continues to be a large portion of revenues, may take longer to normalise than originally thought.

Nevertheless, Qualcomm has increasing exposure to other end-markets including automotive and radio frequency front end. Additionally, we believe a growing number of AI-at-the-edge use cases will emerge (especially where low latency is necessary) that will require Qualcomm's chips.

The Australian dollar depreciated -2.1% against the US dollar over the month, which meant the value of the Fund's US dollar positions increased. As at 31 May 2023, the Fund carried a foreign currency exposure of 94.0%.
